

Jim Metzler, President, Ashton Metzler & Associates

An industry analyst and columnist for Computerworld's sister-publication Network World, Jim Metzler is widely recognized as an authority on both network technology and its business applications. In his more than 30 years of professional experience that includes running a successful consulting organization, Jim has worked in virtually every aspect of the networking industry, including network management at two Fortune 500 companies; the creation of software tools to design customer networks for a major interexchange carrier; engineering management for high speed data services at a major telecommunications company; product management for a network hardware company; and directing and performing market research at a leading industry research organization.